Free Shipping for 500+ Stores

I love shopping online, but a great bargain can lose its luster when the total cost skyrockets because of expensive shipping. Thankfully most online shopping venues offer free shipping on specific items or when you spend a certain amount of money. The trick is knowing which items will come with free shipping and which don't, and knowing which coupon codes will shave the shipping costs off of your order.

FreeShippingOn, a new shopping site scheduled to launch on Monday, wants to be your one-stop-shop for free shipping deals at the Web's most popular shopping venues, such as Amazon, eBay, Newegg, Apple, Best Buy, and more.

FreeShippingOn works with over 500 stores, collects their free shipping coupon codes, and lists them on the site for the world to see. The service doesn't cater just to technology stores either: Online retailers like Adidas, eWatches, GNC, Safeway, The Body Shop, and Zales all have coupon codes and free shipping deals at FreeShippingOn.

The service allows you to search Amazon and eBay directly for free shipping bargains. Because you can limit your searches at both sites to include just those with free shipping, you can click the Amazon and eBay tabs at the top of the page to get search boxes for those sites. Just type in the item you're looking for, and the service will find matching search results without shipping charges.

For any other site, you can click the link for coupon codes and search by tag or store. If you know you're looking for an automotive store, you can click the Automotive tag to find matching retailers. If you know the store you'd like to buy from, you can just scroll through the list to see if there are codes for that specific retailer.

The same people who created DealLocker.com developed FreeShippingOn, and the site is scheduled to launch on Monday, March 3rd. Everyone knows about Amazon's free shipping bargains, but the service could be a real resource to find coupon codes for other retailers that you may not even know have online stores.
