

> Roll over to explore 802.11n
and the Cisco Aironet 1250.

NETWORKWORLD

Home

News

Research Centers

Security

LANs & WANs

VoIP & Convergence

Network
Management

Wireless & Mobile

PDA's

Security

WiFi

WiMAX

Software

Data Center

Small Business
Networking

Cisco Subnet

Microsoft Subnet

IT Careers

IT Buyer's Guides

Events

Site Resources

Clear Choice Tests

Opinions

Blogs

Newsletters

Cool Tools Happy Blog

NetworkWorld.com > Community > Cool Tools Happy Blog

Log in Post Register RSS feed builder RSS feed syndication

Search Community / blogs:

New site highlights free online shipping options

Submitted by Keith Shaw on Fri, 07/25/2008 - 10:59am.

While more people head online for purchases because of rising gas prices, getting the goods from the warehouse to your door still requires shipping, and those costs are expected to go up as FedEx and UPS deal with rising energy costs as well.

Still, many e-commerce sites offer free shipping on some purchases, and a new Web site has launched that lets consumers find specific items that offer free shipping. The site, called FreeShippingOn.com, includes a search bar for items on eBay and Amazon.com, but it also lists locations for coupons for free shipping from several other e-tailers.

True, most of the free shipping offers require purchases over a certain dollar amount, but if you're spending a lot online anyway, you might as well get free shipping if you can. Checking this site out first for any good offers is a good start.

Keith Shaw's blog Add new comment Email this page Delicious
Digg Reddit Facebook Permalink

Read more about: e-commerce economy free shipping gas prices web sites